

Clients are greeted by one or two receptionist in suite 700! They'll arrive at the ultra-modern suite, after going through security (clients will, like all government buildings in the city, have to show an ID; they do NOT have to identify themselves as seeing me; they provide their ID and let security know that they are going to suite 700).

And while clients are seated here, they'll be offered free coffee, tea, or water! It's sleek, clean, classy, and a modern look and feel!

A closer look at the waiting/seating area.

700 12th St NW, Suite 700, Washington DC 20005 The One Metro Center office building, street view! The metrocenter metro station is where the shot is taken from --- most metro lines from all 4 quadrants of the city (and from the tristate area) connect at this center! Clients do not need to drive, park, or even walk! Exit the metro, look for 12th and G (the Macy's exit) and across the street sits the building in which my office is located.

And here's the loveseat view of things, with the overhead lights on. The office can be candescent, florescent or both. The TalkifUwant quilt (draped over the back of the loveseat) was made with shirts from the practice in Tallahassee (by my daughter, an MSW herself)!

And .... the blue and teal colored wall .... above the 'work station' section of my office. Because I am paperless, I use a digital server, provide both online sessions (in two states) and face-to-face sessions in DC the work station is necessary. The digital server is integral to my clients having access to practice services 24 hours a day.

The rooftop lounge is accessible with special arrangements between LaRose and clients who wish to visit this area of the building!

Similarly, the Atrium of the building can be accessed, when arranged between LaRose and clients who wish to have time in this area!

Last thing: for providers who wish to share the space, they will also have access to the 24 hour gymnasium, included in a sublease agreement! I'm currently looking for someone established to take as many as two days per week for a 12 month term!
